Since 1992, Northwest Research Obsidian Studies Laboratory (NWROSL) has provided analytical services for the trace element provenance studies of obsidian and fine-grained volcanic (FGV) artifacts, the measurement of obsidian hydration rims, and the geoarchaeological and geochemical investigation of obsidian sources. We own Thermo Electron QuanX EC and Spectrace 5000 energy-dispersive X-ray fluorescence (EDXRF) spectrometers and operate a longstanding obsidian hydration analysis laboratory. The laboratory holds an extensive collection of geologic obsidian source reference samples from the Far Western United States, Canada, Mexico, and the Western Mediterranean, and we maintain a very active source sampling and analysis research program. Our laboratory facilities are equipped with a 24-hour monitoring system that provides constant security for the artifact collections stored here for analysis.

Northwest Research has successfully completed well over 2,000 archaeological projects in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Pacific Islands, and Western Mediterranean. Laboratory and source information support is provided by our staff and through our websites: www.obsidianlab.com and www.sourcecatalog.com.
